Board approves salary increases

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

With approval from the Board of Trustees Thursday, SIU employees got an 8 percent salary increase for the 1990 fiscal year and already are looking ahead to 1991, asking for a 12 to 15 percent salary increase during that fiscal year.

According to Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit, the 8 percent was an average figure. "Some employees got a larger raise than others," Pettit said. "It will be up to each unit of SIU to decide how the salary increases are distributed."

A salary report from the board indicated that all SIU-C faculty members will receive a 3 percent increase and the administrative and professional staff a 4 percent increase. The rest will be based on merit.

The increases were based on how far behind the employees were from their peers at other universities, Pettit said.

"Each SIU-C employee should look forward to about an 8 percent increase next year, merit included," Pettit said. "However, some employees could get a considerably higher sum."

The board also passed a resolution, increasing the Chancellor's salary as well as John C. Guyon's, SIU-C president, and Earl Lazer's, SIU-E president, salaries by 8 percent.

Pettit said he is pleased with the salary increases for 1990 and is now working on getting an even larger increase for the 1991 fiscal year.

The 12 percent to 15 percent increase for 1991 is included on the Resource Allocation and Management Program (RAMP), which also was approved by the board.

The RAMP document will go to the Illinois Board of Higher Education for approval on Oct. 1.

If the IBHE approves, the document will go to the Illinois General Assembly for final approval. A legislative decision should come during 1990.

The General Assembly probably will alter the figure before approving, Pettit said.

University face lifts approved

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

At its meeting Thursday, the Board of Trustees approved the guidelines necessary for development of the Resource Allocation and Management Program for the 1991 fiscal year.

This program calls for $4.5 million worth of regular capital projects at the University and $33.2 million in science and technology projects.

Regular projects include:

- the $1.5 million renovation of the second floor of the Communications Building. The money would go to construct walls and ceilings, as well as place floor coverings in an area of 12,000 gross square feet;

- $1 million to upgrade the underground electrical system;

- the removal of loose building materials containing asbestos and providing replacement materials with similar insulating qualities.

Thompson's reign gets mixed reviews

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Three Southern Illinois legislators agree that Gov. James R. Thompson's tenure as the state's chief executive has been a political success.

On the other hand, these Democrats aren't sorry to see him go.

Thompson announced in Chicago Thursday that he will not run for a fifth term in the state's highest office. Thompson, the longest-serving governor in the state's history, cited family concerns for his decision not to seek another term.

Representative Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, has been in the legislature for 15 years, longer than Thompson's 13 years as governor. Richmond said he was "somewhat surprised" at the Republican governor's announcement, since Thompson had been making campaign style appearances in small communities and schools across the state.

Richmond noted that Thompson signed the two-year tax increase plan sponsored by House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago, in the face of strong opposition from his own party.

Richmond speculated that Thompson would want to put this politically dangerous issue behind him before waging a campaign in 1990.

Now that Thompson is a lame duck "it could be an improvement" in the legislative atmosphere.

Negative check-off system defeated by board

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

The use of a negative check-off system to fund an Illinois Public Interest Research Group at the University was defeated at Thursday's Board of Trustees' meeting in Edwardsville.

A proposal from the chancellor's office to the board requested that any new student fees for supporting programs outside of the student activity fund be funded by a positive check-off system.

The difference between the two systems is that the negative check-off system would require students to indicate on their bursar bill that they do not wish to pay the fee. This would require students to read the bill and be aware of their responsibility to indicate their wishes.

The positive check-off system would require the students to mark an area that indicates they want to pay the fee.

The proposal warrants use of a positive check-off system for fees used for special student interests and activities, such as the IPIRG, which are not covered under the student activity fee.

The $3 waivable fee would have gone toward funding to establish an IPIRG at SIU-C.

The IPIRG would be designed to find constructive, informed solutions to local and state problems and address various community concerns.

Opponents of the board's decision claim support at the University has been behind the negative check-off system.

Bill Hall, a student trustee for the board, said the Graduate and Professional Student Council and the Undergraduate Student Government supported the proposal, as well as the evidence of 10,000 signatures from students who supported the negative check-off system.

At the board's meeting, Hall requested a motion to table the Gas prices expected to dwindle 10 cents by fall

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

Gas prices are expected to decrease by as much as 10 cents a gallon by fall, Steve Daggers of the AAA-Chicago Motor Club said, but local gas and oil merchants don't expect the drop in price to affect business significantly.

"People still have to drive to work," Jurhee Veach, manager of Veach Shortstop in Carbondale, said. "They still go to the lake on the weekend.

"It might make people more likely to go on a cross-country trip, but around town driving won't be affected," she said.

Six stations in the Carbondale-Murphysboro area reported prices decreasing in the last two to three weeks. The average price for regular no-lead gasoline was $1.03½ per gallon.

"Crude oil is expected to remain between $18 and $20 a barrel," Daggers said, explaining that a calm market usually makes for a price decrease.

"People usually get nervous when oil goes over the $20 a barrel mark," he said. "It doesn't look like this will happen."

Rodger Walker, of Hicks Oil Company in Desoto, said, "The market looks stable and that usually means prices will drop."

Walker said though distributors' prices stay relatively constant, such a decrease would probably be beneficial to them.

"Our price per gallon wouldn't change a lot, but we'd probably do more volume," he explained.

Daggers, an SIU-C graduate, said that during the past two months, gas prices have fallen slightly throughout the

4-day Siberian strike ends; miners given more control

MOSCOW (UPI) — Tens of thousands of Siberian coal miners ended a four-day strike Thursday after the Soviet coal minister signed an agreement giving them more control over the running of the mines and $80 million in pay hikes, a correspondent for the official labor newspaper Trud said. The concessions marked the first time in Soviet history that the government is known to have given in to strikers' demands, and the prompt reporting of developments by official media under Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's "glasnost" campaign was unprecedented.

First lady speaks from 'the heart' at dedication

PARIS (UPI) — First lady Barbara Bush, following her husband's example, ripped up a speech at a hospital dedication Thursday and spoke from "the heart." On her first day in Paris following four emotion-packed days in Eastern Europe, Mrs. Bush told 400 guests at a new wing of the American Hospital: "I want to show you that I learned something from my husband in Hungary" where he discarded a prepared text Tuesday and spoke ad lib to a rain-soaked crowd welcoming him to Budapest.

Rioters, soldiers clash during ethnic unrest

MOSCOW (UPI) — Rioters fired shots at soldiers trying to control ethnic unrest in the Soviet republic of Azerbaijan, where fighting between Azerbaijanis and Armenians has claimed 100 lives in the last 17 months, the official Tass news agency said Thursday. Gunfire also erupted in an unrelated clash between members of the rival ethnic groups, Tass said. There no reports of casualties in either incident, both of which occurred in Nagorno-Karabakh, a mountainous enclave in Azerbaijan bordering the Soviet republic of Armenia.

52 federal facilities added to Superfund list

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency placed 52 more federal facilities on its Superfund priority cleanup list Thursday, including five nuclear weapons plants ranking among the most polluted sites in the nation. By putting the facilities on the National Priorities List of the worst toxic waste sites in the country, the EPA requires the federal agencies responsible for the pollution to sign agreements laying out cleanup goals and schedules that can be enforced in court.

Koch announces he's running for fourth term

NEW YORK (UPI) — Trailing in the polls but still confident of victory, Mayor Ed Koch used a radio talk show appearance Thursday to make what he called the "formal" announcement of his bid for a record fourth term. Koch, 64, has been toying with reporters for weeks about the time of his announcement, leading to speculation that he might be leaving the door open for a move to bow out.

Bush arrives in Paris for economic summit

PARIS (UPI) — President Bush moved into a twin swirl of international diplomacy and historic festivity Thursday, helping open the celebration of the bicentennial of France's revolution as world leaders gathered for the economic summit. Bush, still enthusiastic about the public response he enjoyed during four days in Eastern Europe, arrived in Paris from Budapest, Hungary, and promptly was immersed in the excitement and ceremony sweeping the French capital.

Performer to depart from SIU-C

By Carrie Pomeroy
Staff Writer

Performance artist Shirlene Holmes will bid farewell to the Southern Illinois area on July 16 at the Gillespie Temple when she enacts the role of Sojourner Truth in the solo drama "Ain't I a Woman?"

Holmes, a noted performer, scholar and activist in the University community for six years, will be joining the speech communications faculty at Georgia State University.

Holmes expresses no regrets about leaving the area, saying, "I believe I'm at a threshold, and every end signals a beginning."

Holmes, who came to Carbondale in June 1983, to perform "Ain't I a Woman?" ended up staying at the University to complete a Master of Fine Arts degree in playwriting.

During her stay at the University Holmes wrote, performed in and directed several plays, including the children's play "Leroy and his Wonderdog Pinto," "Amazing Grace" and last year's "No Delour Ahead."

She also published two books of poetry, "Coming into Being" and "After Peace."

Holmes is the recipient of several awards, such as the NAACP Image Award in the Arts, a performance award from the University's speech communications department and an appreciation award from Menard Correctional Facility.

She has been active in local political, church and community organizations and has performed her plays for senior citizens and schools.

Holmes also has established a theater scholarship at the University in the name of Ira Aldridge, an African tragedian.

Holmes has chosen to perform "Ain't I a Woman?" as a farewell gift to a community which she said "has embraced" her. She will perform it at her church because it has been her "central survival mechanism" during her stay in Carbondale, she said.

The play is based on the life of Sojourner Truth, an escaped slave who lived from 1790 to 1883. A tireless advocate for justice for women and blacks, Truth stood as a monument to the power of faith, according to Holmes.

The play depicts Truth as an 85-year-old woman looking back over her life and times.

Holmes said there are a few surprises in store for the play's audience.

"They don't come to see the show, they come to be the show," Holmes said.

"Ain't I a Woman?" will be performed at 4 p.m. Sunday at the Greater Gillespie Temple, 810 N. Wall. The Hughlett Family Singers, a gospel group, will also perform.

Admission is free, but donations will be accepted.

Small oil companies to be helped by state

By Irene Oplow
Staff Writer

Small, independent oil companies in Southern Illinois will benefit from research done by the Illinois State Geological Survey, Lelan Russell, executive vice president of the Illinois Oil and Gas Association, said.

"Most Southern Illinois oil operators are mom-and-pop businesses who have no money for research and development," Russell said. "These businesses depend on larger companies' research and hands-on experience for their knowledge of the oil business."

The Illinois State Geological Survey has received a $750,000 matching grant to study methods for extracting unrecovered oil from wells in Illinois.

The grant covers the first year of a four-year, $2.4 million research program which will study existing oil deposits in the Illinois Basin.

The Basin includes the southern two-thirds of the state and parts of Indiana and Kentucky, according to Michael Kruge, University geology instructor.

Though Illinois produced 25 million gallons of oil this year, this is down from five years ago when it produced 30 million gallons. Illinois wells tend to decline at a rate of ten percent each year, Russell said.

Southern Illinois produces the majority of oil in the state, he said, but only 25 percent of oil is usually recovered.

It is not economically feasible to recover the remaining oil using current technology, Russell said.

More than 90 billion barrels of unrecovered oil lie trapped across the country and oil prices would have to double before most deposits could be economically pumped out, Dr. Donald Oltz, head of the geological Survey's Oil and Gas Section, said.

The study will examine current drilling methods and enhanced recovery that is used when the earth does not produce enough pressure to release the oil.

In enhanced recovery, wells are treated with different substances to artificially stimulate oil production.

Salt water, acid and other liquids are pumped into injection wells to increase oil pressure.

Polymers, which may become an alternative to other enhancers, may help recover more oil from wells by pulling out oil which adheres to rock pores, Russell said.

Currently, all wells and rock formations are treated the same, though certain known reservoirs may differ in characteristics, Russell said.

Enhanced recovery may have different effects on different reservoirs and research needs to be done to treat each individually, he said.

The study will investigate whether these current drilling methods can damage reservoirs and hamper recovery efforts.

Ideas and procedures for discovering new oil fields in Illinois also will be investigated.

Opinion & Commentary

Hart, Saluki athletics look bright for future

THE UNIVERSITY'S Athletic Department is the topic of discussion again. This time, however, there is no talk of eliminating programs, grades of players or coaches leaving for other universities.

The department has released its operating budget for the upcoming year and many coaches are seeing double. Well, maybe double is a bit of an exaggeration. All Saluki sports have received increases in funding by at least 18 percent.

Receiving additional money for a single program's budget or even a majority of a university's athletic programs is not all that uncommon, but to have all sports receive an increase is highly unusual.

ATHLETICS DIRECTOR Jim Hart came under fire several times during his first year on the job and was involved with some unpopular decisions.

When it was decided that gymnastics and women's field hockey had to be dropped to offer greater financing for other Saluki athletic teams, Hart took the brunt of the criticism.

Hart had to deal with the possibility of dropping the University's football program when financial troubles were revealed by Anthropology Professor Jerome Handler.

BUT DURING all the chaos Hart held that the department would get better and more money would be provided for Saluki teams.

And so far he's keeping his word.

During the first 50 days in office Hart pledged to solicit $50,000 in contributions for the Athletic Department. When all was totaled Hart had raised $86,000 that had not been in the department's budget prior to his tenure, which began July 19, 1988.

THE SUCCESS of the men's basketball team, which generated an unexpected increase of $100,000 in ticket sales last season, successful fund-raising efforts and the elimination of the two sports, all played an important role in the increased budgets.

Hart and his staff have been through a tough year and are sure to be through additional troubles in the future. If Hart can continue to produce results as he gains administrative experience, the future of Saluki athletics could be bright.

If the increase in this year's budget can be mirrored in the years to come then the Salukis will be better able to compete in recruiting wars with other universities.

SALUKI TEAMS will be able to travel greater distances, play higher quality teams and schedule additional competition as a result of additional funding.

Hart and the entire athletic department deserve a pat on the back as well as continued support for future success.

Slavery not favored by all forefathers

For the record, prejudice: n. 1. A preconceived preference; bias. 2. Irrational hatred of a particular group, race, or religion. Yes Mr. Pryor it is possible for a member of a minority to be prejudice. Not that I'm saying your a member of a minority, as I believe most people are ignorant.

As far as white upper-class slave owning founding fathers go, I would like to point out that not all white men were in favor of slavery nor were they all upper class. In fact from the period of 1861-65 over two million of our forefathers lost their lives in a war fought primarily to bring an end to the 'peculiar institution,' look it up.

I would say that I'm proud that my ancestors fought on the side of the North, but to say I'm proud of something I had nothing to do with would be vain. Which is exactly my point.

Members of the white population are being held responsible for actions they had nothing to do with. In fact many American immigrants came to this country after the civil war.

Concerning immigration to the Americas, I think the statistics are stacked largely in favor of the United States over Brazil for example, and I think anywhere you go in the world America is an accepted synonym for the United States of America. Few people will think your talking about Brazil. Can you even describe the Brazilian National Flag?

In your spelling of Africa I think you must be referring to the 17th century Dutch word which is the root for the African language Afrikaans. Linguistically the 'c' and 'k' sounds are very similar so it was more of an arbitrary choice made by Dutch explorers. This can be reinterpreted from language to language as the culture from which the name came did not have a written language. Africa is only the English spelling of the name, if you check around you'll find many places have multiple spellings.

Ironically, this is the same type of ignorance that prompted civil rights advocates to adopt Swahili words into their vocabulary, however, no slaves were ever brought from the east coast of Africa. They used the words simply because they sounded neat.

I don't even want to touch the part of your letter dealing with the book "Satanic Verses", it has been hashed over enough recently without stirring things up again. I will say, however, that the people who wanted to shoot flag burners are probably not the same people who thought the death sentence for Mr. Rushdie was wrong.

Your attempt was to make American people look like hypocrites. Which as a whole, the American people are hypocrites, but this is only because this country allows wide and varying opinions to be voiced, even yours Mr. Pryor.

Do not take my reaction wrong Mr. Pryor, I am thoroughly against the degradation and oppression of any race, nationality or creed. And your prejudice attitude is a huge scar on the face of civil rights movement. Lastly, this is a free country Mr. Pryor, no one is making you stay, you are free to leave. Unless of course you want to stay. — C. McClellan, junior in anthropology.

'Unfriendly' women never given clear definition

I am responding to Mr. Beaubien's letter about SIU's unfriendly female population. The first thing that bothered me about the letter was that the word unfriendly was never defined. Is he referring to responses to pick-up lines in bars, etc., or in earnest attempts at meaningful conversation in an appropriate atmosphere? The second thing is that his letter showed a common lack of introspection, a popular form of chauvinism present in our society.

As inhabitants of the planet Earth, women today have many duties, not one of which is to make themselves more desirable to the male population. We are not machines with which to program attractive behavior. We are human beings with our own share of problems and fears, including, but not limited to, increasing population, daily assaults on our bodies from chemicals and pollutants, and a less than adequate world to leave to our children. These are problems we share with men.

A problem that relates directly to this discussion is the amount of violent crimes perpetrated against women today. In spite of mass education efforts it is still a common misconception that women lead their attackers on, or that most rapes occur when a hooded man jumps out of an alley. Seventy percent of all rapes are acquaintance rapes. We must be careful.

Lastly, Mr. Beaubien, I think that in addition to spending so much time coming to your ill-formed conclusions about attitudes and motives, it would be wise to examine your own. If you still cannot find a satisfactory answer, perhaps you should relocate to another school in the United States, since you are obviously well acquainted with them all, where the female population is more concerned with getting dates than an education. — Barb Abrams, senior in English.

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

The SIU-E Professional Staff Association claims the Board of Trustees excluded the professional staff from the 1990 salary increase because of its participation in collective bargaining.

The professional staff in conjunction with the Illinois Education Association-National Education Association held a press conference Thursday, following the Board's approval of a 1990 salary increase, to discuss the Board's action.

Marcus Albrecht, IEA higher education organizer, said the faculty and professional staff of SIU-C voted down the adoption of a union practice, as did the faculty of SIU-E, while SIU-E's professional staff accepted the union practice on Feb. 22.

"All faculty and professional staff had a chance to vote, the outcome was that the (SIU-E) professional staff voted for the union," Albrecht said.

He said the Board's exclusion of SIU-E's professional staff sends a negative signal to those considering unionization.

"They are trying to set an example to other groups that if you vote for collective bargaining, this is what will happen to you," Albrecht said.

"We take this as punitive action," he said.

Albrecht said in the past the Board has given the increase in a across-the-board fashion, not excluding any of the related bodies.

"Past practice prevails," he said. "This is in violation of past practices and, thus, a violation of labor law."

The professional staff and the IEA-NEA claim they did not agree to a postponement of raises when they voted for the union adoption.

Jack Dyer, director of University relations, said the professional staff of SIU-E shouldn't expect to receive a salary increase from the Board when they are in the process of collectively bargaining with management.

Dyer said he expects that after bargaining with management and reaching an agreement a proposal would eventually be taken under consideration by the Board.

"I can't see that it wouldn't be accepted," Dyer said, in light of the fact that proposals and counter-proposals would be ironed out in the collective bargaining process between management and the union.

Albrecht said another opportunity to vote for collective bargaining would come next spring at SIU-E.

Richmond said, adding, "I'm not a big fan of Thompson, naturally."

But Representative David Phelps, D-Eldorado, said Thompson's new status could make him more "dangerous."

"It's going to be interesting seeing this lame duck governor," Phelps said.

Phelps said Thompson might be more inclined to use "intimidation" tactics on legislators now that he will not have to concern himself with how adverse publicity would affect a re-election campaign.

Phelps said Thompson has made great progress in Illinois politics but wondered whether the governor would attempt to involve Republican candidates for governor in the legislative process and whether this would cause confusion in the state house.

But Phelps sees Thompson as someone interested in his own political future before that of his party's and might be more interested in going out of office in a "blaze of glory," as Phelps said, rather than muddling his last months in office by promoting a Republican candidate for governor.

"I think he'll take care of himself first and I think he'll set (out) to help the party second," Phelps said.

Republican Secretary of State Jim Edgar of Charleston is expected to announce his candidacy for governor Aug. 8 and Republican Lt. Gov. George Ryan of Kankakee also expressed interest in the governorship.

Freshman Rep. Larry

Woolard, D-Carterville, praised Thompson as an effective administrator who has "served his state well," but looked forward to the possibility of filling Thompson's office with a Democrat.

Fellow Republicans had kinder words for Thompson's reign.

House minority leader Lee Daniels called Thompson the state's "best governor."

"It will take years to accurately measure the magnitude of his colossal contributions," Daniels said. "Jim Thompson is a bold and visionary leader, a governor who lives by a simple yet exemplary credo — how can I improve the state of Illinois and the quality of life of its citizens."

proposal in order for the new proposal from the chancellor's office to be voted on by University student constituency groups before the board would make a final decision.

The motion made by Hall failed to receive support from any of the board members, thus, killing the motion.

Hall said, in light of the student support, "I had no alternative but to request it."

Hall said the opportunity for the student constituency has not been provided since the groups are not active during the summer session.

Trudy Hale, GPSC president and member of the SIU-C IPIRG organizing committee, said the board chose not to address their commitment to the community by approving the positive check-off system.

■ the construction of an annex to Morris Library. The RAMP program would allow the first $1 million to go to hiring an architectural firm. The total cost of the annex is $59.6 million.

Science and technology projects include:

■ almost $17.2 million for an addition to the physical plant, including an installment of a fluidized-bed combustion system that would cut down on the amount of sulfur in the coal;

■ a $14.9 million biological science building with new research facilities;

■ and a $1 million annex to the Electrical Engineering and Technology building.

The board will submit a report to the Illinois Board of Higher Education by Oct. 1, requesting a total of $60.7 million for these capital improvements and improvements similar to these on other SIU campuses. If the IBHE approves the project, it will be submitted to the Illinois General Assembly for final approval.

The General Assembly will decide how much SIU will receive.

According to SIU Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit, the legislature might not have enough funds to give SIU the entire amount it requests.

"We'll just have to wait and see what happens with the IBHE first before we worry about the legislature," Pettit said.

The new biological sciences building and the steam plant addition were on Gov. James R. Thompson's $360 million program to upgrade and expand science and technology facilities in Illinois universities.

Pettit said it was likely the legislature would give full funding for those two projects.

In other board action, the $199,366 replacement for the roof of the SIU Arena was approved as well as the $274,065 renovation of six residence halls in Thompson Point to accommodate physically disabled students.

country. The decrease follows a sharp rise in the price of wholesale oil related to the Exxon Valdez accident.

"After it became apparent that the supply of oil wasn't going to be hampered, the market calmed down," Daggers said.

One type of area business expecting to experience an increase in sales is the convenience store gas stations.

"Of course we expect our non-automotive items to sell more just because more people will be coming into the store," Kaare Pedersen, regional manager of Smoot Oil.

"If there is no outside influence on the world market, the price should continue to fall," he added.

Floods, landslides in China reportedly kill more than 400

BEIJING (UPI) — Floods and a landslide unleashed by torrential rains have killed more than 400 people and left more than 180 missing in central China's Sichuan Province, Chinese news reports said Thursday.

The worst incident occurred in eastern Sichuan, where a cliff collapsed and sent tons of mud and rock onto a residential compound, burying 238 people, the official Xinhua news agency and the newspaper People's Daily reported.

Rescue workers saved 17 people but recovered 41 bodies and there was little hope for the 180 people still missing, the reports said.

At least 367 other people have died in flooding in 86 of the province's 180 counties as waters immersed towns and villages. Hundreds of other people are reported to have been injured.

Xinhua quoted the provincial flood control headquarters as saying the rains and flooding had cut communications links and highways and destroyed farmland.

Chinese state-run television, on its evening national newscast, showed large areas flooded in the region. Hundreds of people in rural districts had clustered on hilltops and other higher ground to flee the waters and await rescue.

In flooded towns, people waited on rooftops until small boats made their way down flooded streets to pick them up.

The province had already been hit by severe hailstorms earlier in the spring, but a flood control official said this month's rains "have posed the most severe disaster in the past eight years," Xinhua reported.

Water levels in several of the province's major rivers are already above the warning mark and the rains were continuing, officials said.

Undersea volcano erupts in Japan; officials warn of possible tidal wave

TOKYO (UPI) — An undersea volcano erupted Thursday less than 2 miles from the Japanese mainland southwest of Tokyo, shooting huge plumes of white smoke into the sky and sending hundreds of residents fleeing to shelters, officials said.

The Japanese military began mobilizing troops, ships and planes for the possible evacuation of residents in the event of a large-scale eruption, officials said.

The national Meteorological Agency said the volcano erupted in the Pacific off the coast of the Izu Peninsula south of Tokyo — an area hit by tens of thousands of mostly minor earthquakes this month, including two on Sunday that caused injuries and damage.

The eruption began at about 6:30 p.m., causing the earth to rumble near Ito, the closest city on the peninsula, and continued into late Thursday night. Residents of the city of 72,000 saw a towering column of white smoke rising hundreds of feet into the sky.

The Meteorological Agency said the eruption occurred 330 feet below the ocean's surface at a point some 1.8 miles off the coast near the small, uninhabited island of Teishi.

Police dispatched 400 officers to Ito but said there were no immediate plans to evacuate residents from the peninsula. They said hundreds of people voluntarily left their homes to take shelter at elementary schools and Buddhist temples.

The Meteorological Agency issued a public warning that a tsunami, or tidal wave, could be created by the eruption.

The Kyodo News Service said Prime Minister Souse

Uno, in Paris to attend the summit of Western industrialized nations, has requested constant updates on volcanic activity.

Teen dies in auto accident

A Carbondale teen-ager suffered fatal injuries after losing control of his vehicle and striking a tree, Jackson County Sheriff's department said.

Police said John A. Brandon, 16, was north bound on Springer Ridge Road Wednesday night when his vehicle left the road and struck a tree near the town of Boskydell.

Police were called to the accident at 10:23 p.m., where Jackson County Coroner Don Ragsdale pronounced Brandon dead on the scene.

Ragsdale said a toxicology report will be forthcoming, but he doesn't suspect alcohol to be involved in the accident.

ABC television interviewee sentenced 10 years in China

BEIJING (UPI) — A man arrested after giving an interview to the ABC television network on last month's violence in Beijing was sentenced Thursday to 10 years in prison and two other people were executed in an ongoing crackdown, Chinese news reports said.

State-run television, on its evening newscast, said Xiao Bin, a factory worker, was convicted at a trial in the northeast city of Dalian. The case drew international attention last month after authorities used the U.S. network television tape to identify the suspect.

In central Sichuan Province, two people were executed for offenses connected to rioting in the provincial capital, Chengdu, that erupted June 5 in response to the bloody June 3 army suppression of the democracy movement in Beijing.

Two more arrests were also reported in Beijing and Shanghai for offenses related to the crushing of the pro-democracy protests.

More than 2,500 people are known to have been arrested, but the actual number is believed to be far higher.

After initially reporting large numbers of arrests, Chinese authorities restricted public information on the crackdown in response to a worldwide outcry.

In the Dalian case, Xiao, 42, had given an interview to ABC in the days after the June 3 assault on Beijing in which he recounted casualties and other details.

The tape, which fell into the hands of authorities, was later shown on national Chinese television with the label "this man is a rumor-monger" and viewers were urged to turn him in.

He was arrested the next day, prompting U.S. television networks to begin hiding the faces of interviewees. His arrest was prominently shown on Chinese television.

The television report said Xiao was convicted of "propagating counterrevolutionary lies" and sentenced to 10 years in prison, with an additional three-year suspension of political rights.

The two executions were reported in the Sichuan (Province) Daily.

Mandela inspires black majority to negotiate peaceful settlement

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Taking the cue from jailed-for-life black leader Nelson Mandela, anti-apartheid activists Thursday declared a willingness to negotiate a peaceful settlement to South Africa's racial conflict but said the "ball is in the government's court."

A statement from Mandela on his meeting last week with President Pieter W. Botha triggered a unified response from the black majority and a reaffirmation that the minority white government must meet some basic conditions before any talks begin.

These include the release of Mandela and all other political prisoners, the lifting of the ban on the outlawed African National Congress and all other anti-apartheid organizations, the return of exiles and the end of a three-year-old state of emergency.

Mandela's rare sanctioned statement, distributed by the prisons service Wednesday night, was splashed across the front pages of South Africa's newspapers Thursday with the largest black newspaper, Sowetan, carrying a bold headline reading "Mandela speaks."

"Mr. Mandela has made his position clear on his commitment to peace," said South African Council of Churches General Secretary Frank Chikane.

"The question of the hour is whether the government is going to make the attainment of peace possible by removing the obstacles it has placed on its path," he said.

Ochoa, three other Cuban officials executed for betraying the nation

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Gen. Arnaldo Ochoa, a hero of the Cuban revolution and a close friend of President Fidel Castro, was executed Thursday along with three other senior officials for betraying the nation by trafficking in drugs, the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina said.

A three-member military court Friday found Ochoa, former Interior Ministry official Col. Antonio de la Guardia, secret police official Maj. Amado Padron and Ochoa's military aide, Capt. Jorge Martinez, guilty of treason and sentenced them to death by firing squad.

"Today at dawn a sentence dictated by a special military tribunal was carried out against the accused," said Prensa Latina, identifying the four without further comment in a dispatch from the capital of Havana monitored in Mexico City.

The much-decorated Ochoa had fought in the popular uprising led by Castro that overthrew dictator Fulgencio Batista Jan. 1, 1959.

Hot flag proposal meets cold legislative reality

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush's proposed constitutional amendment on flag burning and the red-hot emotions of the issue collided with cold legislative reality Thursday at a sometimes testy House hearing in which influential critics urged Congress to go slow.

The first House hearing on the matter brought an expected array of witnesses, including lawmakers who support and oppose Bush's plan to change the Constitution to prohibit flag desecration as well as those who prefer the middle ground of trying to reach the same goal with simple legislation.

None of the positions outlined before the subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights were new, but it was clear that the panel dominated by Democrats skeptical of Bush's plan would not rush to advance the proposal.

House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois, one of the main sponsors of the plan, conceded it faced problems in the Democrat-led Congress. "We didn't come in here thinking the track was greased... certainly not in this subcommittee," he said.

"I think you should remember that our responsibility is not to rush to judgment," subcommittee Chairman Don Edwards, D-Calif., told the Bush plan sponsors. "I think this committee... should do a very careful, thoughtful job... and "You can go and dig all you want and you can bring up all these questions, but it's what the people want. They're going to get it one way or another."

—G.V. Montgomery

not insist that it be brought to the floor of the House right away."

Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., a primary backer of the Bush proposal, became somewhat annoyed at some of Edwards' criticisms and contended the constitutional change is being demanded by the vast majority of Americans.

"You can go and dig all you want and you can bring up all these questions, but it's what the people want," declared Montgomery, the head of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee.

"You've got to get that through your head, Don," he told Edwards. "This is what the people want and if we don't do something about it they're going to do something about it. They're going to get it one way or another."

Bush proposed the constitutional amendment after the Supreme Court ruled last month that burning the American flag was a protected form of free speech.

While almost all Republicans and many Democrats rushed to support Bush in the politically popular move, a number of Democrats, including House Speaker Thomas Foley of Washington and Edwards, criticized the approach, arguing it would not be wise to tamper with the First Amendment's free speech guarantees.

However, Foley and some others, recognizing the potential political danger of opposing the amendment, have supported efforts to write a new law that would counter the court's ruling.

Seven U.S. military policemen wounded in Honduras explosion

Unknown assailant flees after hurling homemade bomb

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (UPI) — Seven U.S. military policemen in Honduras were injured, three seriously, when an unidentified assailant threw a bomb at them on a street in the port city of La Ceiba early Thursday, U.S. and Honduran authorities said.

The assailant escaped and no one immediately claimed responsibility.

Charles Barclay, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa, said three of the victims were injured seriously, but "all of them are out of danger now."

Two other military policemen escaped injury in the blast in the Caribbean port.

Authorities said an unidentified assailant threw a home made bomb at the MPs on a street in La Ceiba, about 125 miles northeast of the capital of Tegucigalpa.

Three U.S. military policemen were seriously injured and four were slightly injured in a midnight explosion at La Ceiba," the Pentagon said in Washington.

Anne Sigmund, another U.S. Embassy spokesperson, said no one has claimed responsibility for the attack, and that U.S. and Honduran military and police were investigating the case.

The soldiers were assigned to Joint Task Force Bravo, based at Enrique Soto Cano Air Base near Comayagua, about 60 miles northwest of the capital.

All of the soldiers were taken to the nearby Hospital Vincente D'Antoni in La Ceiba. The exact nature of their injuries was not immediately known.

The four soldiers who were slightly injured were reported later Thursday to be in good condition and were flown back to Soto Cano Air Base.

Lt. Col. Erick Sanchez, commander of Honduras's 4th Infantry Battalion based in La Ceiba, said early Thursday the Honduran authorities had arrested two American suspects, but Pentagon officials said the report appeared to be false and that the two uninjured MPs might have been detained by mistake.

The MPs were in La Ceiba to escort a U.S. convoy to Enrique Soto Cano Air Base Thursday morning.

Almost all of the approximately 160 American soldiers at La Ceiba are from Task Force 164 of the North Dakota National Guard. However, the MPs are members of the regular Army, the Pentagon said.

The task force recently completed a new road construction project in the Yoro Valley as part of "Exercice Fuertes Caminos 1989."

The only regular military facility in the area is the Soto Cano Air Base, where 1,200 American soldiers are stationed for six-month tours.

It was the third attack against American soldiers this year.

On Feb. 1, a convoy of seven vehicles carrying more than 30 American soldiers was attacked by unidentified gunmen in northern Yoro Province.

Graduate students to display artwork at University Museum

By Carrie Pomeroy
Staff Writer

The Master of Fine Arts exhibits of painter Siona Benjamin, sculptor Susan Mills and photographer Cheryl Broadie will open with a public reception from 6 to 8 p.m. today and run through July 20 at the University Museum in Fanner Hall.

To Benjamin, who is originally from India, her cultural heritage is an important influence, which is reflected in her exhibit, titled "Altars and Offerings."

Benjamin evokes the spirit of India in everything from the texture of her paintings, which is rough and grainy like stone walls in India, to her choice of ancient subjects like trees and religious icons.

"I like to seek the past to create the future," she said.

Benjamin, who has been painting with oils since 1976, tries to make her paintings "a space a person can look into." One of her paintings, a depiction of a door, actually incorporates a wooden door which opens on a temple-like scene. Many of her paintings "flow" from wall to floor to create the impression of an altar.

Benjamin also paints with enamel on copper, a technique more commonly used in jewelry. She became interested in this technique while studying art in India.

"I'd see these colors used by the jewelers and I liked them for their opacity. They had almost a still water feeling — a sacred feeling."

Benjamin has had exhibits in Bombay, Delhi and Australia.

Susan Mills creates her bronze, iron and aluminum sculptures as a response to her intimate relationships. Transformation, both in art and in personal interactions, is important to her.

"Through the changing of my relationships, I've grown," she said.

Change is in turn reflected in her work. The process of sculpting, from conception to casting, is a process of transformation, Mills said. "It's like giving birth," she reflected.

Describing her sculpture as "quiet, somber images," Mills said she derives the shapes of her sculpture from sea animals, plants, rocks and women's bodies. Rather than portraying these subjects figuratively, she depicts them on a subconscious level, emphasizing the aspects they have in common with other forms.

"If you can take my scrutiny, I can take yours."

"I have a weird theory that we're all interrelated and time is a cyclical thing...Past, present and future can merge in one moment, and my pieces are trying to talk about that moment," she explained.

Susan Broadie's exhibit of black and white photographs focuses on the lives of Carbondale lesbians. Her portraits of nine different couples in their own homes include tapes in which they talk about jobs, relationships with parents, friends, lovers and other issues in their lives.

Broadie, who is herself gay, said:

"You could classify it as documentary, but it's very much about me."

Broadie takes a very personal approach to her art and tries to close the distance between photographer and subject. In the past, when photographing at Main Street East (now Two Hearts, Inc.), she often handed her camera over to other people and asked them to photograph her.

"If you can take my scrutiny, I can take yours," is her approach to her subjects.

Broadie felt that photographing the women in her thesis exhibit in their homes was a way of balancing the control in the photographer-subject relationship. Broadie, who rarely uses her studio, wanted to show lesbians as normal people with normal lives.

Broadie feels that gay people need a feeling of history and identity. She hopes her photography can help fill a gap by "giving us some imagery to look back on for the future."

The museum is located at the north end of Fanner Hall. Hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sundays. Admission is free.

Tour de France riders endure heat

MONTPELLIER, France (UPI) — Valerio Tebaldi led a two-man Italian breakaway in scorching heat Thursday to win the 150-mile, 12th stage from Toulouse to Montpellier in the 76th Tour de France.

Overall leader Laurent Fignon of France, conserved his energy in the temperatures that heat up to 100 degrees, finishing in the pack some 21 minutes back.

Tebaldi broke free 12 miles into the stage, and held the lead the rest of the way before edging countryman Giancarlo Perini in the sprint to win at five hours, 40 minutes, 54 seconds.

Dominique Arnaud of France was third, 2:09 behind, after a fall left him behind the stage leaders 23 kilometers from the finish.

Leading the pack at 21:24 behind was Thomas Wegmuller of Switzerland, who placed fourth.

Fignon maintained his seven-second lead over Greg LeMond of the United States in overall standings, and the rest of the top 10 overall kept pace.

"The heat kept us from making any initiatives," the Frenchman said. "We just kept cool, trying to avoid a fall. We reacted only when the margin became large. If it had continued, Dominique Arnaud could have taken the yellow jersey. None of the teams wanted to really move."

union's committee on drug prevention. "We would like to have an independent body handle the tests and take them out of the hands of the NFL to make sure there's no hanky panky going on. If there's opposition to this, there's something drastically wrong going on."

Upshaw said the players' plan was adopted at a June 11 meeting "because union leadership was concerned about accuracy of tests, methods of testing, lack of confidentiality, and lack of concern for players."

"The purpose of this plan is to protect the players," Upshaw said. "Each time the commissioner tests the player, the player will take a portion of the sample for storage and analysis by our lab. This will be a check on the league so that we can be sure there are no mistakes, no tampering, or inaccurate results."

Fralic, emphasizing the doubts some players have about current testing procedures, expressed the fear that the league might use drug testing for punitive purposes — "like getting back at me because I've been so outspoken on this and other issues."

"We don't want drugs to be a bargaining chip in negotiations," Fralic said. "This is not what it's all about. It's about people living and dying."

Ted Schramm, president of Behavior Research in Lakeside, Calif., has been selected by the union to administer its drug-testing program.

Another area Brechtelsbauer wants to shore up is the team's pitching. The Salukis had a team ERA of 1.73 last season. "I don't want to say the pitching was all bad because it was good at times," Brechtelsbauer said. "Sometimes this game comes down to one play, one hit, or one pitch. At times, we didn't make that one pitch."

The Salukis received some help in the pitching department when it signed Centralia star pitcher, Angela Mick. Mick went 18-7 with a .66 ERA her senior year. She was also 17-4 with a .20 ERA as a junior.

"Angela could help and she throws hard," Brechtelsbauer said. "She had a great career at Centralia and was also one of their leading hitters. She needs to perfect a changeup and come up with a rise and drop pitch to offset her fast-ball. If Angie does that, I think she will be tough."

Returning Saluki pitchers include Traci Furlow (9-9, 1.55 ERA); Jennifer Brown (7-5, 1.58 ERA); Lisa Robinson (6-6, 1.83) and Dede Darnell (2-2, 2.78) saw limited action because of injury.

"It's hard to say who the leading pitchers are because they are about at the same point," Brechtelsbauer said. "Lisa and Traci could be leaders if they stay ahead of the count. Traci kept us in every game she pitched in."

A couple of additions will add even more depth to the Saluki lineup according to Brechtelsbauer.

Roxanne Lee, who played on the now-defunct field hockey team last season, will transfer over to the softball program. "I haven't seen Roxanne play a lot of softball yet but I watched her play field hockey; she's a fighter," Brechtelsbauer said.

Although Lee is a sophomore, she has four years of eligibility left and has been working on her softball skills this summer.

Julie Illner, Lee's former field hockey coach, said: "I haven't ever seen Roxanne play softball, but I know she is quick and competitive ... I know she has been involved in summer softball and played on some good teams. She knows the game and her quickness should be an asset to the softball team."

Brechtelsbauer also has signed Colleen Holloway out of Chillicothe. "Colleen has a quick bat and is a good hitter," Brechtelsbauer said. "She is a quick, exciting young ballplayer and I expect her to contribute once she adjust to college pitching."

The Salukis finished fifth in the Gateway Conference and will be out to prove they are a better team next season, Brechtelsbauer said.

"The girls are eager to come back and show that they are a better team because they feel they just didn't come through last season," Brechtelsbauer said.

Harris said he would like to see a specific skateboard area built at the Recreation Center. "That would be great. I think some of the stunts these guys can do are incredible."

The standing policy for skateboarders is to ask them to leave if there is a complaint. Starratt said that around the library, the sidewalk surfers are usually accommodating.

If the skaters refuse to leave after campus security has asked them, the skateboards are confiscated.

If the skater is an SIU-C student, the matter is turned over to the dean of Student Life for review.

If the skater is not a student, the board is held by security until the skater's parents come pick it up, Harris said.

One solution to banning non-student skaters from the campus would be requiring a University registration decal much like a bicycle has. That is something Harris said he will not consider. "That is not something we want to try," said Harris, claiming that it would just be too much trouble.

where the volleyballers play with scary professionalism, spiking the ball as if they wanted their opponents' blood.

As it turns out, she said, many volleyball players don't drink alcoholic beverages — before, during or after the beer garden contests. If they do drink, it's usually water or fruit juice. A winning team, which could be entitled to a free pitcher, would not necessarily get beer.

It makes sense, I mused, as I watched a teammate's bad serve roll over my beer cup. What's the point in buying a beer if it's just going to get warm or be spilled? Besides, after sweating and trying to play so hard, my good beer buzz was pretty well worn off.

By not drinking alcohol, that 100-foot high net, might not look so tall. A sober player might just be able to spike that ball with energetic precision. A sober server might find that strategic place on the opposing side to play the ball. And the game could even be more fun when not playing drunk.

But I've never wanted to play sober. If go to bar, I usually want to drink. That's usually why I go. But others might just go to hear the music, play volleyball — and — not drink.

Volleyball nets, horseshoe pits and softball fields give people a reason to go to a bar to do something besides drink. The same goes for dance floors, pool tables, dart boards and pinball machines.

It's OK not to drink (alcohol) when at a bar. Any responsible bar owner would say so. And the one who set me straight is one of them.

Wrestling hits SIU-C Arena

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

Pro Wrestling is real. Just ask any of the 3,000 some odd fans that attended Wednesday night's wrestling extravaganza at the SIU-C Arena.

Fans are the essential element to this ... um ... sport. The managers and wrestlers throughout the match would turn to the audience to get the crowd chanting, clapping, cursing and booing.

Sports Analysis

If Wild Bill Irwin felt interest was waning, his opponent Scott Hall would remain stunned on the tarp while he primed and poed around the ring to incite the anger of the crowd.

This is one of the central acts of the wrestlers and reappeared as often as body slams during the evening.

IT IS LIKE the scene in Peter Pan where Tinkerbell is ill. Peter the Pan (Good wrestling name. Peter the Pan vs. Captain Hook) pleads with the kids to clap their hands if they believe in her. The faith of the kids arouses Tinkerbell and all is well.

The crowd at the Arena was filled with kids. Wrestling has become the Ice Capades of the 80's. Pro-wrestling even had it's own cartoon for awhile on Saturday mornings right after the Rambo animated fun show.

However, the adults outnumbered the kids and they took it more seriously too. One spectator, for no apparent reason, engaged in fistcuffs with a surprised, but until then boisterous fan.

THE SPECTATOR'S BRAWL happened during the climatic six-man tag team match between Freebirds and the Midnight Express and Dr. Death. The attention of the crowd went immediately to the unrehearsed scuffle, proving how sincere it was about the sport and how easily distracted.

The fight in the stands was a draw.

The fights in the ring were less spontaneous. While maybe not rehearsed as much as a Russian ballet, many of the moves were done by rote.

Everyone knows who the bad guys are and who the good guys are because many of the wrestlers are seen on television. Brent Wilderman, 19, from Waltonville claimed: "I heard the bad guys make more money."

THEY SHOULD. Any film critic will tell you that the key to a good action-adventure movie is a menacing bad guy. In wrestling the boos are much louder than the cheers and the cheers go up for the heroes in direct relation to the bad guys reputation.

Wild Bill had a whip, which was a nice touch. Plus he made cameo appearances frequently throughout the match. He was clearly a man with ambition.

The Road Warriors were probably the best of the bad. Looking like something out of "Mad Max," they were greeted with a lusty round of boos. However, on this night they were content to live off of their reputation.

THEY SQUARED OFF against Norman the Lunatic and a last minute substitute Samoan. Norman was the most creative of the bunch. Dressed in an all-white outfit (Like a patient in a mental ward, get it?) and a huge hair-covered head, Norman kept the crowd in stitches.

His manager had these car keys and waved them in front of the Lunatic's face making him an instant zombie. Alright, maybe not creative, but after three hours of wrestling he was a welcome deviant.

The big event was supposed to be "The Two Ring Triple Crown King of the Hill Battle Royal," which featured somewhere around 16 grapplers in two separate rings.

WITHOUT ANNOUNCERS though, it was difficult to figure out what was going on. They let the crowd know just who was heaved out of the ring, but it was not the chaos that was hoped for.

Most of the wrestlers just stood around huffing and pushing, all the while realizing they should stretch it out to at least 20 minutes.

Dick Murdoch, a candidate for the George Kennedy look-alike contest almost held out, but suddenly went limp and got flung.

In the end it was Rick Steiner standing alone. Which was convenient because he was on the marquee for the next match.

REAL? MAYBE NOT. In a weird sort of double-think way the people attending the match know it's make believe, yet they definitely place an emotional stake on the outcome.

Fans remarked as they were leaving how Hot Stuff Eddie Gilbert was robbed or about bum calls as if it was real. They believe, they make themselves believe.

St. Louis to get new soccer team

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Businessman Milan Mandaric said Thursday the Major Indoor Soccer League has voted St. Louis to field an expansion franchise for the upcoming 1989-90 season.

It will be the city's second entry into the league. St. Louis had one of the premiere professional indoor soccer franchises in the early 1980s, the Steamers, but that team folded a year ago.

Mandaric said St. Louis can return to be a bright spot for the MISL.

"I don't think it's time to open the champagne yet because we have a lot of work to do," said Mandaric, who will serve as franchise president and chief executive officer. "But I'm making a commitment that St. Louis will be a model MISL franchise."

The new St. Louis team does not yet have a name. There is a dispute over legal rights to the nickname, "Steamers."

The Steamers were a model franchise when the MISL was in its infancy. The Steamers averaged 17,017 fans per game during the 1981-82 season.

SIU Security discussing skate policy

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

The skateboarders for the most part are attacking the concrete at home this summer, but when they come to campus this fall they may not find that they are welcomed back with open arms.

Robert Harris, Director of SIU-C Security, said the campus police are formulating what the policy will be concerning campus skateboarding.

One of the main hang outs for the skaters is the north entrance of Morris Library. Harris said that area is now off limits. "They like to use the wheel chair ramp. People in the library can't study or read."

Jay Starratt, assistant director of library services, said: "We get sporadic complaints from patrons about (skaters) getting in the way." He said he's noticed fewer people are skateboarding this summer than in the fall or spring semesters, but that he expects them back in the fall.

"Once we got a complaint from a handicapped person," Starratt said, adding that the skateboarders tend to take over the area.

collisions with skateboarders. "We've had people hurt pretty bad. There've been a few broken bones."

Harris admitted that one solution may be a ban of all skateboards from campus. "Some guys will claim that they use the boards as transportation. Well everyone rides bikes the same."

"You get guys on skateboards and some are good and can stop on a dime going 40 miles per hour, but the average guy will get someone hurt."

Harris said he hopes to work with the skaters and thinks one of the options could be designated skateboard areas. He said the University is in contact with other schools to find out possible solutions to the problem.

Prairie State Games begin with change

The Sixth Annual Prairie State Games, featuring some of Illinois' finest amateur athletes, got under way Thursday with a change in its format.

According to Mark Daniel, sports expert for the PSG, said the Governor's Cup will not be given to the region accumulating the most points.

Individual medals will still be given out to winners in each event. Previously, the Governor's Cup was given on the last day of the event to the region that scored the most total points in the Games. There are eight regions taking part in the Prairie State Games.

"The consensus of people who organize the Prairie State Games felt that the Governor's Cup defeated the purpose," a spokesman for Daniel said Thursday. "They felt it wasn't fair because these athletes participate to have fun as well."

The operating budget is down from last year, but a shuttle transit system is expected to increase attendance at the Games which will run from Thursday until Sunday on and around the University of Illinois Champaign-Urbana campus.

"With the way these Games are organized now, a lot more people are interested in them," the spokesman said. "In years past people didn't know about the Games but now more people find out. There are also more people trying out and interested in amateur sports."

Event organizers expect more than 10,000 athletes, coaches and visitors to converge on campus for the games, which were created in 1984 by the Illinois General Assembly as a program of the Governor's Council on Health and Physical Fitness.

Basketball and weightlifting are among the major attractions of PSG. Among the other sports contested are soccer, tennis, shooting, wrestling, swimming, gymnastics, judo, fencing, archery, volleyball and track and field.

This year's Games also include wheelchair events. Approximately 12,500 people took part in regional competitions to qualify for some 3,000 berths in the PSG.

Softball to have team of seasoned veterans

SIU-C Saluki softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer has all of her players returning from last year's 24-22 campaign and said she hopes to see improvement after another season of experience under its belts.

There were no seniors and only one starting junior on last year's team, which finished fifth in the Gateway Conference with an 11-10 mark.

"We were inexperienced in some key spots last season," said Brechtelsbauer, who attained her 300th career at the end of the season. "With another season under their belts, hopefully the team will continue to improve."

The Salukis will look for leadership from three-time All-Gateway Conference selection Shelly Gibbs. The Saluki second baseman was picked as the team's MVP for the third consecutive season. She led the team in eight offensive categories and became SIU-C's first player to make the All-Midwest team.

The Saluki team captain is ranked 12th nationally in homerun hitting with five homers in 46 games, which is a school record.

Gibbs held 12 school records, including 11 career homers. She hit .357 last season to lead the Salukis. She is the first SIU-C softball player to be listed among the NCAA individual statistics leaders. "I think Shelly could be a real role model and leader for our younger players," Brechtelsbauer said.

Other power hitters include Billie Ramsey, a freshman outfielder, who hit .339 and was named to the all-conference team as a designated player; Cheryl Venorsky, a freshman shortstop, who hit .338; and Mary Jo Firnbach, hitting .328 as a sophomore and making only three errors at third base.

"We have a lot going for us in the hitting department," Brechtelsbauer said. "But we left a lot of runners on base last season and we need to improve on that. Sometimes it's not the number of hits a team gets; it's when the team gets them."

Beer gardens not always for drinking

"OK, OK, I'll play," I say as my friends drag me on to the sandy volleyball court at a certain Carbondale beverage consumption establishment.

Reluctantly, I tried to play volleyball, making feeble attempts at spiking, jumping up at a net that seemed to tower at least 100 feet. My service was lousy too, with the ball flying out of bounds, nearly spilling a spectator's drink.

Throughout the match, which was a chaotic, impromptu and drunken affair (Score? Heck, we don't need no stinking score!), I watched my beer get warm and sand-filled on the sidelines.

This is beer garden volleyball. At least my experience of the game.

However, as it has been pointed out to me by a local bar owner, beer garden volleyball can be an organized, highly competitive contest, as is the case at her establishment,

NFL players request independent drug tester

ATLANTA (UPI) — NFL Players Association Executive Director Gene Upshaw says players don't trust NFL drug-testing procedures and want the league to share samples for independent analysis, but Commissioner Pete Rozelle refuses to cooperate.

The players union held a news conference Thursday to announce it was going ahead with independent testing — with or without league approval.

"We'd like for the league to split samples with us, but, if that isn't the case, we'll take voluntary samples on our own," said Atlanta Falcons tackle Mike Kenn, newly elected NFLPA president. "It's something the players in the league have been concerned about a long time and we're moving along as quickly as we can."

Kenn said the issue was brought to a head by an article in a national sports magazine that indicated the league's drug program was not being administered in a fair manner.

"Players rights are not being protected under the NFL drug program," Kenn said. "We want a drug program that will protect players rights and help players who have drug problems."

"We all have questions about what is going on," said Atlanta guard Bill Frawley, appointed by Kenn as chairman of the Supporters of the bill contend it is needed to help win a professional football expansion team for St. Louis. They also say it will help persuade owners of professional baseball and football teams in Kansas City to keep their clubs in that city.

"I haven't made a decision yet on the bill," said Ashcroft. "I'm in the process of making up my mind, and I've spent several hours working on it today."

"It's a complex bill and there are a variety of things to consider."

Ashcroft said intense pressure put on him by prominent business executives and public officials in St. Louis and Kansas City to sign the bill will not affect his final decision. If he vetoes the bill, the General Assembly could attempt to override his action at the special veto session to be held in September.

"The bill has to stand or fall on its own merit," said the governor.
